

Brandywine Hospital Lights Up for Breast Cancer

(Friday, October 3, 2008 – Coatesville, PA) On a crisp fall night, over 60 women gathered in front of Brandywine Hospital in Coatesville to illuminate the front entrance in pink lights in recognition of October as Breast Cancer Awareness Month. The crowd was filled with breast cancer survivors and community members all joined together to show the importance of early detection and diagnosis in the prevention and treatment of breast cancer.

After the lighting ceremony, all the participants attended a program presented by Healthy Woman, a free resource of Brandywine Hospital. The program focused on coping with anxiety and relaxation techniques. Everyone participated in a yoga lesson and enjoyed the camaraderie of women of all ages.

The pink lights will stay on the entire month of October. For more information on Brandywine Hospital's Healthy Woman program, call 610-383-9000 or visit www.brandywinehospital.com.
